Harbor Seals, Pups, Kids and Murals

By Elizabeth Cowley

This years Harbor Seal Mural Project was revealed at a ceremony at Cypress Lookout Point in Pebble Beach on April 3. This is the third year that the Pebble Beach Company (PBC) and the SPCA have collaborated in the mural project which provides local school children with an opportunity to learn about harbor seals and the bay environment through creating 35 panels which form a protective barrier between the seals and humans during the birthing season. Fifteen schools participated in painting the mural panels which depict four ocean environments and corresponding sea life; small holes are cut in the panels to provide subtle viewing of the seals and pups.

Harbor seals are protected under the Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972. The PBC has participated in the harbor seal protection program for the past 9 years. The harbor seals must remain undisturbed during the birthing season as the mother seals may abandon or trample their young if alarmed.

Aki Fujiwara, Lone Cypress Company Vice President, Edith Johnson, Monterey County Supervisor, and Mark Verbonich, PBC Vice President of Community Affairs were among the attendees. Several participating teachers and students were present to receive plaques of appreciation although many could not come due to the spring break.

Gene Fryberger, PBC Environmental Manager and Roxayne Spruance, PBC Naturalist, are both involved with the PBC environmental outreach educational program and will give harbor seal tours at Cypress Lookout Point for school children and environmental

Carmel woman dies in fire in her home

Virginia Adadow, 74, of Carmel died in a house fire at her residence on April 3.

Mid Valley Fire received a call of a house fire at 11:40 p.m. The next door neighbors tried to enter the house to rescue the victim but were forced back due to the heat and smoke.

Ms. Adadow was found deceased in the living room, seated in her chair. It appears that a cigarette may have caused the fire and ignited the chair, with the resulting smoke overtaking the victim.

An autopsy was conducted on April 4 at the Monterey County Coroner Facility. Further investigation will be done by Mid Carmel Valley Fire Department and the Coroner's office.

Water Board looks at strategic plan

At its April 3, 1996 special meeting, directors of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) and management staff developed a Strategic Plan that includes a refined mission statement, three year goals and six month objectives. The firm of Snider and Associates facilitated the meeting with the goal of obtaining consensus by all participants on the elements of the plan.

The mission statement (agency purpose) developed by the group states: "The mission of the MPWMD is to manage, augment and protect water resources for the benefit of the community and the environment."

A set of five goals to be accomplished within the next three years include: 1. increase the water supply to meet community and environmental needs; 2. protect the quality of surface and groundwater resources and continue restoration of the Carmel River environment; 3. assist California-American Water Company in developing a legal water supply; 4. instill public trust and confidence in the District; and 5. manage and allocate available water supplies and promote water conservation.

The group also set specific objectives to be accomplished within the next six months in order to accomplish the three year goals. The objectives include what action must be taken, who is responsible, and when the task will be completed.

The Strategic Plan will be considered for formal adoption by the Board at its April 15, 1996 meeting. Monthly updates of progress on the objectives will be presented at each regularly scheduled Board meeting, at which time the Board may modify or refine objectives.

Copies of the draft Strategic Plan developed at the April 3 meeting are available at the District office for public review. Call the District at 649-4866.

Cal-Am turns on the water on Carmel Valley Road 30" pipeline

California-American Water Company made the final connection to the new 30-inch transmission water main on April 3.

During the time of the changeover from the older water main to the new, areas of Carmel and Pebble Beach could experience discolored water.

Cal-Am says the water is completely safe to drink; however, washing clothes in discolored water is discouraged.

The new ductile-iron, cement-lined pipe replaces 16,000 feet of pre-1906, 22-inch, riveted steel water main.

The work was completed ahead of schedule by Monterey Peninsula Engineers.

Water Board acts to protect permits to build the dam

At its March 18, 1996 meeting, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) Board determined that its focus should be on water supply alternatives other than a new dam, but permits it holds for a new dam on the Carmel River should be kept viable. The Board directed its staff to:

1) ask Judge Richard Silver to clarify whether permits could be transferred under his ruling that the environmental document (EIR) for the project be set aside until additional studies were performed on the possible effects of a new dam on nearby vineyards;

2) meet with the California-

American Water Company (Cal-Am) to ascertain its plans for a new water project, and discuss possible compensation for the publicly held permits;

3) meet with the State Water Resources Control Board (SWRCB) staff to clarify what actions must be taken to comply with the "reasonable diligence" requirements to keep the water rights permit for the dam viable; and;

4) advise the Board of its findings and hold a public hearing on the issue of transferring permits for the dam to another entity.

The Board's action stems from requests by various parties, including elected officials and members of the community, Cal-Am and the SWRCB, to clarify what action the Water District intends to take in the future regarding a new dam.

MPWMD General Manager Darby Fuerst also advised the Board of a March 11, 1996 letter from the SWRCB to Cal-Am. The letter stated that rather than restudying or conducting new studies to determine how to provide a reliable water supply with valid water rights, Cal-Am should use previous studies by the Water District as a basis to develop specific projects to correct existing environmental damage to the Carmel River. Cal-Am must produce a compliance plan within the next few months or face possible action by the State Attorney General, according to the letter.

In other action, the Board approved the first reading of Ordinance No. 83 that would allow water pumped from non-Cal-Am wells in Carmel Valley to be transferred to the Cal-Am system if no net increase in water taken from the river system occurs.

TOUCHING BASES

Peter Lyon

"Who's on first?" opens one of the great Abbott and Costello routines; "Who is first?" opens the Carmel Valley Little League season. We are proud to present the following firsts of the 1996 Major League Season in what must be the most beautiful ball-park in California. After all, where else is the enchantment of the river murmur, the lovely light of just-spring, and the scent of new-green and the first lupine magic enough to mingle just so with the heart-lifting cry, "PLAY BALL!"

Monday, March 25, 1996 was the unofficial opening of Little League play on our fabulous famous fields. And what a great day it was: the Lions in their autumnal tawny lined up against the Indians in their blue, red and white. The Indians, who have been (as history would have it) the home team in the Valley for several millenia, chose feisty pitcher Nathan Ricigliano to hurl the first ball of the season at waiting batter Brent Vandervort while Mark (The Brick) Lundy crouched behind the plate.

But Lions have been around a long time as well, and in the bottom of the first inning it fell to Robbie Lamvik to sail the first pitch into catcher Brent Vandervort while lead-off batter Damon Hattori did the honors for the Mighty Blue-men at the plate. Indeed, Damon's honors were such that he produced the first hit of the 1996 season. Other shining stars of the game were Sam Strong and Jesse Armstrong for the Indians and Terey Cordrey and Ian Smith for the Lions.

Not to be outdone, the Eagles and the Cougars went at it in the first game of the Double A season. With the managing and coaching rosters well-represented by the leagal profession, it is a wonder that the outcome of that game was not moot, with Fields and Hannon leaving not a player on the bench.

For Wednesday, March 27, the Falcons lined up against the Tigers for the second full game of the 1996 Major League season. On the mound none other than one of the fine young athletes of the league, Tim Covington, reflecting the care and coaching of his unquestionably atheletic father, Don. Tim's battery-mate was stalwart Zeph Peterson, well able to handle the power that Tim was delivering. The lead-off batter for the Tigers, that still dangerous Mean Green Machine, was none other than Sam Saunders, who kept Tim guessing with two well-struck fouls before he lined out. So much for the first half of an inning which produced some heat but little light on the scoreboard.

When the Falcons came to bat in the bottom of the inning, starting pitcher Zach Schiffman hurled one ball past Perkin di Grazia to the cannon-armed receiver, Pat Lyon; then Perkin smashed a line drive to the short stop, who fired to first in a classic Major League move to retire the batter.

No account of the game and the beginning of the season would be complete, however, without mentioning the fact that Tim Covington scored the first hit of the contest, nor should we fail to mention David Steinberg's two-run round-trip blast over the left-center fence, the Very First Home Run of the Season. This column is delighted to honor David's fine performance and to commend Mom Steinberg, who was in the scorer's booth, on her calm announcement of son's mighty blow.

Now that we have honored the real reason for Little League, the fine players, we should also wish to mention the parents and other community members who make baseball happen here in paradise. It is only fitting therefore, that the managers and coaches of these first teams to take the field be given a moment of glory. Gary, Pennington, Pam Priano, and an especially effective assistant coach, Steve Hohler, are presently piloting the Indians to a fine season. Rusty Vandervort and Rick Smith guide the Lions. Larry Warcken and Don Covington give wing to the Falcons, while perrenial masters of the Green Machine, Glen Nolte and David Stainbrook, shape up the Tigers. Michael Fields watches over the Eagles, and John Hannon does the honors for the Cougars. We'd also like to give special mention to Terry De Salvo, an excellent umpire, who may often be heard humming a chorus from "Am I Blue?" Good job, all you umps. It's not easy to crouch out there inning after inning with an imaginary target painted on one's back.

"Classical or country?"

So we're off to a great season. Don't forget that in spite of the many games already played, Opening Day will occur itself on

Has NASCAR become a wimp's sport?

NASCAR is billed as the best in American Car Racing. Name brand American cars - Ford, Chevy, Pontiac - dueling on the southern and iron belt oval tracks from one-half mile to almost two miles.

NACAR is all American ... Goodyear, Firestone and Kelly-Springfield and so on, are the sponsors. This is driving American cars on American freeway-styled race tracks. This is American cars and a cast of macho 1950's driver characters racing down and dirty, bump and grind ... sliding sideways across the finish line.

NASCAR is the testing ground for engines, trannys, tires, shocks, chassis, oil and every other component that may end up in your off-the-dealer's-lot American car.

Can you explain why NASCAR stops or cancels their races when there is a little bit of rain or if the weather gets a bit cold? Our once vaunted NASCAR seems to have turned into a media circus for a bunch of "southern belles" - pretty teams, boys and sponsors, all looking for glamour and no racing.

IRUSA, SCCA, VORRA, F-I are doing real racing - rain or snow, wet or dry.

What good is a car that will only run on clear sunny days, when the road is dry, the temperature is over 40 degrees Fahrenheit, and the road surface is cleaner than the bathroom floor in a five star hotel?

The salvation for NSACAR may be to go to paramutual betting, like horse racing. Then, along with NASCAR's other sissy roles they could add driver weights, along with their other roles that discourage real racing.

Your Newspaper and Public Information

One of the things that makes our nation great is that most business and personal transactions between individuals or companies are matters of public record.

Speeding tickets, divorces, property transactions, marriages, lawsuits, corporate activities, and most of what we do that involves our government are matters of public record.

There are many reasons why people should be able to rely on their community newspaper to report matters of public record.

The first reason is that every citizen does not have the time to visit every public office - sheriff, recorder, county clerk, courts, assessor, planning/zoning and supervisors - to review information that may be important to them.

The second reason is that when the information is published in the newspaper, it often enables people to provide leads in criminal matters or to avoid potential harm in civil matters.

The third reason is that publishing of certain information may be important for the public safety of the community. For example, it is significant for all of us if a neighbor has been arrested or convicted of arson, rape, homicide, auto theft, etc.

Fourth, there is a small group of our neighbors who abuse the public safety services we all pay for with our tax dollars. On a frequent basis they claim to hear noises or smell smoke or mistake gas pains for heart problems. Our County 911 staff is generally very good at sorting the "false calls". It is fair for the community to know who these public safety abusers are.

The Sun exists to provide news, general intelligence, information and a limited amount of entertainment. The years old practice of printing the Sheriff's log absent of names and addresses is a dis-service to our community.

We all have a right to know what is going on in our community. It is the responsibility of your newspaper to provide that information.

The Sun is not invading anyone's privacy. Even in our exclusive community, it is a legal certainty that reporting the names and addresses of people engaged in public safety actions, lawsuits, property transactions, and any other matters of public record, should be known to all.

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

Well, good, The Unabomber turned out to be just a retired professor, instead of a wealthy and popular sports figure, so they may be able to find a jury willing to convict him.

In other news, we've got to find cheaper ways to win national elections. The U.S. instigated Gulf War didn't work, because it ended too soon, and our cost in lives wasn't great, but this Savior of the World project in Bosnia is going to be very costly, even for the leader of the Seven Richest Nations Group, (the United States, if you hadn't guessed, which is now signed up for a total debt increase from $4.9 trillion to $5.5 trillion.)

One of our aircraft, loaded with important people interested in Bosnia re-building contracts, could have waited for better flying conditions. Its loss added to the cost of a project that has already been recognized as hopeless. Neither the combatants, nor the well-meaning nations trying to force peace on them, with the exception of the U.S., see any sense in continuing the program. However, our President has committed our country to this project, which likely will wind up as the start of World War Three long before it brings peace to Bosnia.

And it is just one of the re-election campaign strategies we've looked at. Bullying Cuba kind of died down, in favor of sending our fleet to Taiwan to provoke China. And, bear in mind that neither our President nor any members of our Congress will have to go overseas in uniform to lead our men into battle.

The latest gimmick to distract public attention from our own problems within our own boundaries, including our inability to live within our means, comes from our Secretary of Defense, who informs us that we are contemplating an attack on Libya, to keep Khadafi from manufacturing deadly war gases.

LETTERS to the Editor

Some thoughts on the constitutional merits of RSC's position

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Have "property rights" been deleted from the Constitution? Since when can a few people who don't want any development next to their own property circumvent the due process of a decision made by elected officials, who weighed all facts, listened to all arguments over a six year period, and arrived at a unanimous decision in favor of the Rancho San Carlos (RSC) development? These officials were elected because of their integrity and intelligence in such matters, and it is an insult to intimate they were "bought".

Sierra Club's arguments against RSC are without realistic substance. Mountain lions are an argument? How ridiculous. They are everywhere. They have the whole Los Padres National Forest to roam through, and also come through my ranch and yard regularly. Large acreage homesites are nothing they fear or stay away from. Their numbers are decimating the deer population because of "no hunting" regulations, and they have already attacked domestic animals in ranch yards. They need no coddling by the Sierra Club at the expense of private property owners.

All other wildlife is unaffected by this type of development, and thrive where people are (particularly if these people try to raise a flock of chickens). Golden eagles dive on squirrels 50 yards from my house. Mallards and geese live in our pond 50 feet from my studio. Where is this destruction of habitat?

Needless over-regulation of so-called "endangered species" and "habitat destruction" is destroying the whole ranching industry in the west, and it is particularly unfair when you find that this habitat - meadows, water holes, etc. - often were created by the ranchers, who also protect their land from poachers. For the first time in years, wildlife on RSC will be protected from poachers and will thrive.

Dog Show and Obedience Trial at Pebble Beach

The Del Monte Kennel Club's All-Breed Dog Show and Obedience Trial, known as the "Classic of the Pacific", will be held on the lawn in front of The Lodge at Pebble Beach on Saturday, May 18. This very special dog show is chaired by Dr. Jacklyn Hungerland and will feature 700 blue ribbon winners representing most of 151 different breeds now recognized by the American Kennel Club.

A distinguished panel of judges will be headed by Richard L. Bauer of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, judging Best in Show. Also on the panel are: Dr. A. W. and Mrs. Betty Krause of Henderson, Nevada, judging Sporting and Terrier, and Non-Sporting, Toy and Herding Groups respectively. C. E. Trotter of Antioch, Tennessee will judge Hound Group, Mrs. Barbara Heller of Sarasota, Florida will judge Working Group, and Obedience will be judged by C. T. and Sharon Fulkerson of Eugene, Oregon.

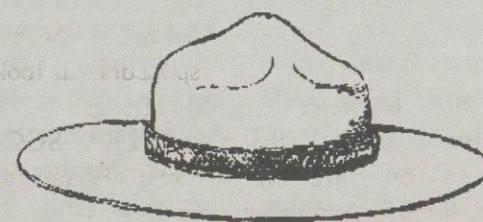

Formerly of Carmel Valley, Mrs.

the Junior Handlers. She will also compliment her husband's assignment by judging the individual hound breeds. Mrs. Trotter, as Pat Craige, taught at Carmel schools for many years and is an internationally known breeder of Norwegian Elkhounds.

Admission to the show is $10 for adults, $5 for children 12 & under. Ticket price includes Pebble Beach gate fee. Tickets may be purchased at the Pebble Beach gates on the day of the show, or in advance for $8 after May 1, at Total Dog, Madrigal, Suds & Scissors, and Pet Pals.

Proceeds for the show will benefit the Quota Club of Carmel's service projects, particularly the Hearing Dog Program.

For more information, call Joan Lawson, Publicity Chairman, at 624-2912.

VALLEY FINANCE

Douglas Pease

Some of us remember the ritual of "the cold morning start": pump the gas pedal three times, pull the choke all the way out, turn on the ignition, press the starter button, stop, wait, repeat all the above until the engine starts or floods. If the engine actually starts, proceed to the "warm up" ritual: keep enough gas so the engine runs above idle, slowly push the choke in as things sound better, turn on the heater, push down the clutch, put 'er in gear, and drive to work.

Today there's a computer chip in my engine which does everything but drive.

Others of us remember the ritual of finding information on the Internet in its early days. The process approximated gossip ("Did you hear that so and so has been working on such and such at this address...?")

Today there are web directories, search engines, and "agents" to help us find what we are looking for. We can understand "directories", from our years with the telephone. Search engines go a million steps further. An Internet directory can help us locate things along the line of "Art", "painting", "impressionism". "Claude Monet", and take us eventually to some of the artist's paintings at the WebMuseum, Paris. A search engine responds to an "impressionism" query with Monet, his colleagues, his critics, where his paintings are now, his influence on the post-impressionists and ... more than we really want to know.

Now we can task an electronic agent to report to us on the day a Monet exhibition opens in California, or to prow around and collect all the prices impressionist paintings have brought at auctions over the past year, five years, or twenty years. The agent delivers only what we want, and only when the job - which might take months or years - is done.

Technological advances removed the need for us to understand the "rich" or "lean" functions of our automobile carburetors on a cold morning. Then they brought all the world's information to our doorstep, at least to the doorsteps of those homes with an Internet connection. Now information technology literally constructs order out of chaos for us.

Tell me we face an economic downturn anytime soon. If we do, it won't be for lack of information or for lack of jobs in the information industry.

I do miss that quiet moment of triumph with the choke all the way in, the engine purring and responding precisely to the accelerator, the heater finally defrosting the bottom of the windshield ... you just knew it was going to be a great day. The ritual has disappeared, but today's prospects are brighter.

COMPUTER TALK

Val Healey

Part 5 - An introduction to computers at a naively simple level.

The central processor unit (cpu) can be divided into the 3 basic units all of which work together. These are: the control unit, the arithmetic and logic unit (alu) and the memory. With instructions from the software the control unit directs the operations, e.g. may instruct a scanner to scan a page into memory, i.e. to take all the information from a page in the scanner and store it according to given instructions in the memory. The alu and memory have two way traffic between them. The alu conducts its operations in arithmetic form, even highly complex mathematical manipulations, and they are conducted on strings of 0s and 1s. Typical logical operations are: if A>B then ... or, if John Smith's sales exceed $100,000, then give him a bonus of ... We will see this in operation when we look at how the software functions.

Information streams around between these three units, being placed into memory, and later being retrieved or written over with new values. As one would expect with vast amounts of information being moved around in the computer it is critical to be able to keep track of it and this is accomplished by "memory addressing" i.e. by dividing up the memory into blocks and labelling each block. Bear in mind that, since all information has been reduced to 0s and 1s, that's all the memory has to store.

The operating system (os) is loaded into specific memory blocks first, when the computer is switched on, and each peripheral is associated with certain addresses. The allocation of memory addresses to peripherals can be a considerable problem when installing additional cards in a computer. An address has to be chosen that does not clash with the addresses already in use. It is not at all unusual for a computer to refuse to start up because a new card has been added and an address conflict occurred. What complicates the situation somewhat is that the addresses are usually expressed in hexadecimal values. We will look at numbering systems soon. Most of the remainder of the memory is then available for the application(s) being used, an application being defined as a program, e.g. for word processing, image editing, doing calculations, faxing, etc.

With so many things happening very quickly within the system, some means has to be provided to prioritize the operations. For example, a printer may send a signal to the control unit and at the same time some information may be coming in via the fax/modem. Which should have priority? All peripherals must have a priority assigned in advance and, clearly, so that the person using the computer can control everything the keyboard must have one of the highest priorities. The prioritization is achieved via interrupt requests or irqs and these are numbers from 0 to 15 usually.

Every signal from a peripheral is sent to the control unit together with the irq of that peripheral so the control unit knows the priorities of each request. The system timer has the highest priority with the irq of 0, the keyboard has 1, the printer port has 7, etc. Irqs may be shared by two peripherals so long as they are not simultaneously used.

Thus, when installing a card in the computer, the new address and the irq have to be selected carefully. The card often has miniature switch settings that allows these to be chosen. The newer Plug and Play (pnp) cards have no switches and can configure themselves during the automatic installation process.

AN EASY TECHNIQUE
FOR YOU,
STICK WITH IT.

I PREFER TO

I ACHIEVE IT BY TRYING EXTRA HARD

IS PROMOTED BY STAYING FULLY BEHIND

collection of industry leaders to the event. Prominent landscape designers and artists will create display gardens that respond to the dramatic natural beauty of this setting, as well as the inventive spirit of the west coast.

Guided by the show's theme for 1996, "American Garden Style, Indoors and Out", these idea filled displays, (sheltered in a 7800 square foot, all-weather tent), will define sophisticated, yet comfortable ways to explore the transition between interior and exterior.

Garden Design's editor in chief, Dorothy Kalins, sums up the timeliness of this theme: "A confident sense of personal style and environmental fervor have led a whole new generation of Americans to rediscover the satisfaction of their own backyards -- and they want gardens that reflect the individuality and sense of adventure that fill their homes. An innovative garden style is sweeping the country. It's incorporating a full palette of natural themes and materials, and it's erasing conventional boundaries between indoors and out."

Throughout the Pebble Beach show, in a series of seminars and informal talks, a distinguished panel of floral and landscape designers, horticulturalists, ecologists, and other experts will offer practical and provocative insight into a wide range of topics, from antique roses and classic arbors to the newest varieties of drought resistant grasses and gardens for healing.

Speakers will include Bunny Williams, noted interior designer and gardener, whose Treillage shops in New York and San Francisco (at Gump's) have become meccas for garden style; Dr. Rayford Reddell, owner of the Garden Valley Roses and author of "The Rose Bible and Growing Good Roses"; and John Danzer, an authority on garden furniture history, both in America and abroad.

The Pebble Beach Show is part of Pebble Beach Company's ongoing effort to preserve and enhance the natural beauty of its immediate surroundings and the entire Monterey Peninsula.

Charities benefitting from the event will be Hospice of the Central Coast and the Pebble Beach Company Foundation, which supports youth and education programs in Monterey County.
